Ben takes centre stage (Ben Barba) page 9

Upon receiving his Dally M Medal as the NRL's top player in 2012, Ben Barba admitted he never thought it could have been possible.

"My size was an issue for me. I always thought I was never big enough. And I'm not going to lie now: I still see some of those big blokes on the field and think, 'I'll avoid them'. But eventually they'll get tired. You just have to keep running," said Ben on Dally M night.

After being frustratingly held back from first grade, despite breaking a bunch of Bulldogs point scoring records in the lower grades – Ben had to persevere against doubts about his size, and ability to match it physically with the NRL's elite players.

Jump forward to the 2012 season, just a few short years later – and it's no wonder Ben is still grasping the magnitude of this achievement, and how quickly it has arrived. Only 12 months ago, not many would have predicted just how rapidly the young player's star would rise, but under the coaching of Des Hasler, Ben has dominated the competition this year thanks to his uncanny attacking and try scoring ability and competent defense – making him an exceptional all-round footballer.

On what will surely be one of the great nights of the young fullbacks' career, he scooped no less than four awards at the Dally M presentation night in Sydney, winning not only the major award of the night in the Dally M itself – but also the Fullback of the Year Award, the Provan-Summons People's Choice Award and the Peter Frilingos Memorial Award.

Ben was a runaway winner for the Dally M with 32 votes in all. His nearest competition, Matt Bowen, finished six points adrift. It was a big night for Indigenous football – three out of the top four players in the Dally M race were Indigenous – with Johnathan Thurston ranking fourth.

Ben now joins the likes of Cliff Lyons, Laurie Daley, Preston Campbell and Johnathan Thurston as Indigenous players to have won rugby league's most prestigious award.

Two Indigenous athletes are competing at the London Paralympics this month. 15-year-old Amanda Fowler from Blaxland in New South Wales will swim for Australia in the S14 classification for athletes with an intellectual impairment. Amanda was selected for the Games after winning seven gold medals at the 2011 Global Games in Italy. Torita Isaac from Queensland will represent the country in athletics and has prepared for the competition while completing her Year 12 certificate. She suffers from cerebral palsy and is legally blind and will compete in the T38 class.

The late Jimmy Little's 1963 classic song 'Royal Telephone' has been included in the National Film and Sound Archive's National Registry of Recorded Sound. The registry is a selection of sound recordings with cultural, historical and aesthetic significance to life in Australia.

The number of indigenous students in higher education has jumped by more than 40 per cent over the past five years, but Aboriginal people remain under-represented at Australian universities.

The 2012 Bush Bands Bash is nine years old this year and will be taking place on Friday 7 September at 'The Hub' - Anzac Oval, Alice Springs. The concert is one of the highlights of the Alice Desert Festival calendar and each year musicians from all over Central Australia compete for a spot in the line-up. The 2012 Bush Bands Bash line up is: Sunshine Reggae (Haasts Bluff, NT); South East Desert Metal (Santa Teresa, NT); Sandridge Band (Borroloola, NT); Irrunytju Band (Wingellina, WA); Central Reggae Band (Fregon, SA); Desert Mulga (Nyriripi, NT). Special guests are Tjupi Band (Papunya, NT) and Blackstone Band (Blackstone, WA).
